

I recently went back to court on motions made by my ex-wife. It took a year and my wife showed up the day of the trial with a lawyer. It was scheduled the next week. At that day I said to the judge Please your honor my daughter means too much to me to continue without a lawyer and she refused me that right. We continued and I lost custody of my daughter and was reduced time with her. During the original divorce I completely modified my life to be totally accessible for her starting a business and buying a home in the same town. My ex-wife worked 8-5 and I didn't want our child to daycare always. I limited her time there and she was my inspiration for work and life in general. I am currently devastated by the orders there is an untold story that I couldn't possibly handle on my own and I froze in court.

The pain is immense I had shared custody now I don't I cannot visit her whenever I want anymore. The courts have taken away from this child a loving available parent to it seems to comfort the mother. My daughter for 2 years now doesn't want to go with mom and like I said the pain is unbelievable. I am waiting response from a motion to reconsider and then I will appeal to the superior court. I don't know what else to do. I miss my child like nothing you could imagine. I feel I did nothing to deserve this but shelter my daughter from verbal abuse from mom and withheld info from her the court thought I was wrong. everybody makes mistakes and for my daughter and I to live with them it seems forever is unjust. I am currently looking for help and support.....